General Comment

RIN 1210-AB 32

With regard to this Proposed Ruling.

The government has no right to take away my choice to use options trading in my Retirement Account!

Myself along with millions of other investors are not only highly educated but capable of deciding what forms of investing and levels of risk that are relevant in our lives. Options trading in many respects is a conservative approach and a method in reducing investment risk. Using options trades in my Retirement account is critical towards the success of my long term investment and retirement strategy. Look at the software technology, investment educational materials and information that are at the tips of investors fingers and minds today.

Why eliminate the ability of those who understand options and have been trading successfully for years from those who choose not to invest in options, don't understand options or prefer other standard investment methods.

Eliminating the ability to trade options, covered calls and the like from Retirement accounts will greatly cripple the ability of many US citizens, including me, from being able to retire as a significant percentage of our personal wealth comes from our retirement accounts. I've studied investing and have invested in stocks for many years. Using options as an investment option in my Retirement account, or any other account, should solely be my option!

When is this administration or any other administration going to stop putting limits and rules on its people and reducing the ability of American Citizens from seeking greater financial independence. Leave our money alone!

Respectfully,

George Jr.
